The world's first ERP system born in the cloud

IT ALL STARTED...

.. in the 1970s. In a barn in a small village called Åmsosen, deep in the fjords of Norway. There, Jakob Hatteland loved experimenting with technical gadgets and electronics. He soon realised his hobby could also be his livelihood.

Jakob built a business of buying and selling electronics and soon became a major Norwegian distributor of computer components.

The key to success was control of information. Therefore, one of Jakob's first employees and fellow electronics nerd, Ingvar Hognaland, started to build a business system. In the 1990s, Ingvar developed the business system to become a separate product compatible with any similar ERP system worldwide. They named it RamBase.
